

ACT II

MAN

2:1

The creatures were of all sizes, colors, and shapes
and to every pair in every species
Earth's mother granted the power to self-create.
Land was wide but more narrow than ocean
and the creatures were in constant motion.
Those with wings spent much time soaring above
while others with fins spent life swimming below.
Many of them walked on four legs
and settled in the jungles
but one type of beast balanced itself like the trees. On two legs
it walked, and reached out to Good with two arms.
That species wanted something more
and was summoned forth to accept Her chores.

New man
She named its kind.
What an incredible mind.
An atypical being.
Here are heart and eyes for seeing
our universe.
Utilize yourself
to search the world for answers.
Exercise your hands
to till my daughter's lands.
All seeds sown
during your stay here, flourish when grown so learn all that can be known.
Though life will be short love throughout life will live forever. Be well new man, for Earth is your well.

When Good had finished speaking
She left the new man creatures
looking up and they could see the universe.
Each one had love in the heart and understood that man beings should share their hearts with Good.
They would build Good-loving societies and thank the mother of Earth often for all the gifts She provided.

Upon one another will fall no despair
for we shall raise our voices in prayer.
This is love that She imparts.
Let us promise to keep it forever in our hearts.
May Good exist in all of us
and may all of us be good.
